He got a grant for 25 acres of adjacent land, and had a resurvey done, which included his mother's 154 acres of land. Then he sold his portion of the land to his brother, Jerry B. Lindsey. William K. Lindsey died in 1858, and Jerry B. Lindsey died ca. 1863 in the Civil War. The dispute was over whether Mary Lindsey owned the land, or if the heirs of Jerry B. Lindsey owned the land. James S. Kelly, age 51, deposed that both William K. Lindsey and Jerry B. Lindsey always spoke of the land as belonging to their mother, Mary Lindsey.

						true, then John A. Johnson should certainly have known the name of his niece's husband, and Alex Lindsey was likely the given name of Elliot Lindsey. He may have been Alexander Elliot Lindsey.	John A. Johnson, age 69, deposed that he lived about ½ mile from the land in question, and that he had lived there about 40 years. He said he recalled when Alex Lindsey purchased the land from Nathan Bershears (Nathan Brashears), and that after Alex died, Mary Lindsey had lived on the land, and had been living on the land for 25 years.
